Cranbrook Academy of Art

Cranbrook Academy of Art Home | Cranbrook Academy of Art \(cranbrookart.edu\) is an internationally recognized school that teaches exclusively at the graduate level. Founded in 1932, Cranbrook Academy of Art offers MFA degrees (2 years of tuition) in ten departments – 2D, 3D, 4D, Sculpture, Fibre, Painting, Ceramics, Metalsmithing, Photography, and Print Media – and MArch degrees (2 years of tuition) in the department of Architecture. Every department is led by one artist who is both Head of Department and Artist-in-Residence. There is no fixed curriculum as Cranbrook's pedagogy uses an independent study model: each department consists of approx. 15 students all of whom pursue their individual practice under the mentorship of the respective Head of Department. There are periodic group reviews where Artists-in-Residence come together to review the work of students across multiple departments. Throughout the academic year, many specialists – such as the fellows - enrich student learning.

In addition to the mentioned departments, Cranbrook also has a Programme in Critical Studies led by the Head of Critical Studies. In the Critical Studies programme, Visiting Fellows and researched-based artists teach students in seminars or small study groups. In Critical Studies there is a curriculum involving aesthetics, philosophy, art history, sociology, and intellectual history.

College for Creative Studies (CCS)

The College for Creative Studies (CCS), Art and Design College for Undergraduate & Graduate Degrees | College for Creative Studies \(ccsdetroit.edu\) located in midtown Detroit, strives to provide students with the tools needed for successful careers in the dynamic and growing creative industries. CCS fosters students' resolve to pursue excellence, act ethically, engage their responsibilities as citizens, and learn throughout their lives. With world-class faculty and unsurpassed facilities, students learn to be visual communicators who actively use art and design toward the betterment of society. Its graduates are exhibiting artists and teachers, design problem solvers and innovators, as well as creative leaders in business.

Founded in 1906 as the Detroit Society of Arts and Crafts, CCS plays a key role in Detroit's cultural and educational communities. The Studio Art & Craft programme emphasizes the development of creativity and critical thinking skills that can be applied beyond specific disciplines, and graduates will have the expertise and versatility needed to thrive in diverse industries.

Studio Art & Craft is rooted in the disciplines of ceramics, digital fabrication, digital media, drawing, fibres/textiles, glass, installation, metalsmithing/jewellery, painting, performance, print media and sculpture and combines traditional making with contemporary processes and progressive technologies. Students focus on producing meaningful works of art and/or learning the artisan's role in designing well-crafted functional form.

Working alongside internationally recognized faculty who serve as mentors, students also benefit from direct access to extraordinary facilities – allowing them to pursue a focused study in any of the disciplines within Studio Art & Craft, or explore a multi-disciplinary approach that integrates a diverse range of Studio Art & Craft courses and skill development.

Quinones is especially interested in getting their students to think of Fibre in terms of new public art.

Practical information

The artist Anders Ruhwald, who has lived in Detroit for 10 years and therefore has a deep knowledge of the schools, the local scene, and relevant networks, coordinates the Visiting Artist Fellowships. Anders Ruhwald conducts all dialogues concerning practicalities regarding the stay as well as dialogues with the schools. He will also be responsible for introducing the schools and the artistic scene in Detroit by telephone, video meetings, and email before the stay starts.

When you arrive in Detroit, Jose Arenivar will welcome you and introduce the city, the local area, and the residency flat at 3583 Dubois Street. Jose Arenivar lives at this address himself and will be available for dealing with any practical concerns on an ongoing basis.

You must arrive in Detroit before the first week before your stay starts (see the specific dates relating to your area of expertise listed above). This is so that you have time to settle in and coordinate with the school before your residency begins.

During the first week at the school, you will have a meeting with the department head and give a lecture to the school's teachers and students within your professional area. The lecture should be based on your practice, research, or work you intend to carry out during your stay. During the subsequent weeks, you can concentrate on your own work.

In parallel with this, you must provide individual critical reviews with the students. You will also have the opportunity to hold a master class, if this makes sense in relation to your practice.

If you are awarded the grant to establish networks elsewhere in the United States, your network-oriented trip will have to take place either just before or right after the fellowship.

Towards the end of the stay, you will have the opportunity to have a conversation with the department head, who can provide feedback on both your practice and your involvement with the students.

The Detroit Visiting Artist Fellowship offers:

- Residence in Detroit in one of the two residency flats at 3583 Dubois Street.
- Access to workshop facilities at Cranbrook Academy of Art or the College for Creative Studies (CCS) in Detroit.
- Access to the schools' artistic and intellectual community and networks.
- The opportunity to give lectures/presentations/a master class on your practice, the research, or the work you plan to do.
- Feedback from Department Head on both your practice and your involvement with the students.
- The opportunity to support the internationalisation of your work, your networks and your artistic development.
- A grant of DKK 50,000 that covers a round-trip flight ticket, local transportation/car rental, insurance, expenses for materials, possible return shipping of works.
- The opportunity to establish networks with a further grant of DKK 10.000 for a one-week network-oriented trip elsewhere in the United States.
- A bike
- An introduction to Detroit as a city and the arts and design scene before arrival by Anders Ruhwald.
- An introduction to the local area by Jose Arenivar in Detroit, who is available to the residents throughout the period.

It is possible to bring your family, who can live in the residency flat, which can accommodate up to four people.

You must have a driving licence.

It is the responsibility of the Visiting Artist Fellows to take out insurance and apply for a visa in plenty of time. If you cannot apply for ESTA, it is important that you state this in your application so that the schools can best support you in securing access.

How your application is evaluated

The main criteria for all grants awarded by the Danish Arts Foundation are the artistic quality of the project and the artistic talent related to the project. The Committee for Crafts and Design Project Funding processes the applications and evaluate the project's artistic quality based on the following criteria:

Professionalism

The project develops and challenges practice, ideas, traditions and materials.

Coherence

The project has a thoroughly thought-through connection between ideas and the methods and/or effects chosen.

Significance

The project exhibits the artist's reflections on how the project creates significance in relevant situations.

The Committee for Crafts and Design Project Funding evaluates all applications and, on this basis, prepares a shortlist for Cranbrook Academy of Art and the College of Creative Studies. The schools' department heads select the Visiting Artist Fellowship candidates. After this, Anders Ruhwald follows up with a conversation with the candidates. Before the residency starts, the selected candidates and the department heads will hold an online meeting. Every applicant will receive his or her reply at the same time. This will be no later than 12 weeks after the application deadline.

Please be aware:

After your stay has ended, we will send you an evaluation form which must be answered and returned to us.

It will be taken to consideration in the evaluation of your application if you have applied for grants from the Danish Arts Foundation within the past three years.

The committee reserves the right to not grant Visiting Artist Fellowships if the applicants does not meet the standards of artistic excellence and talent as well as the other requirements of the open call combined.
